

After the bombs, there was nothing.
There was no one.

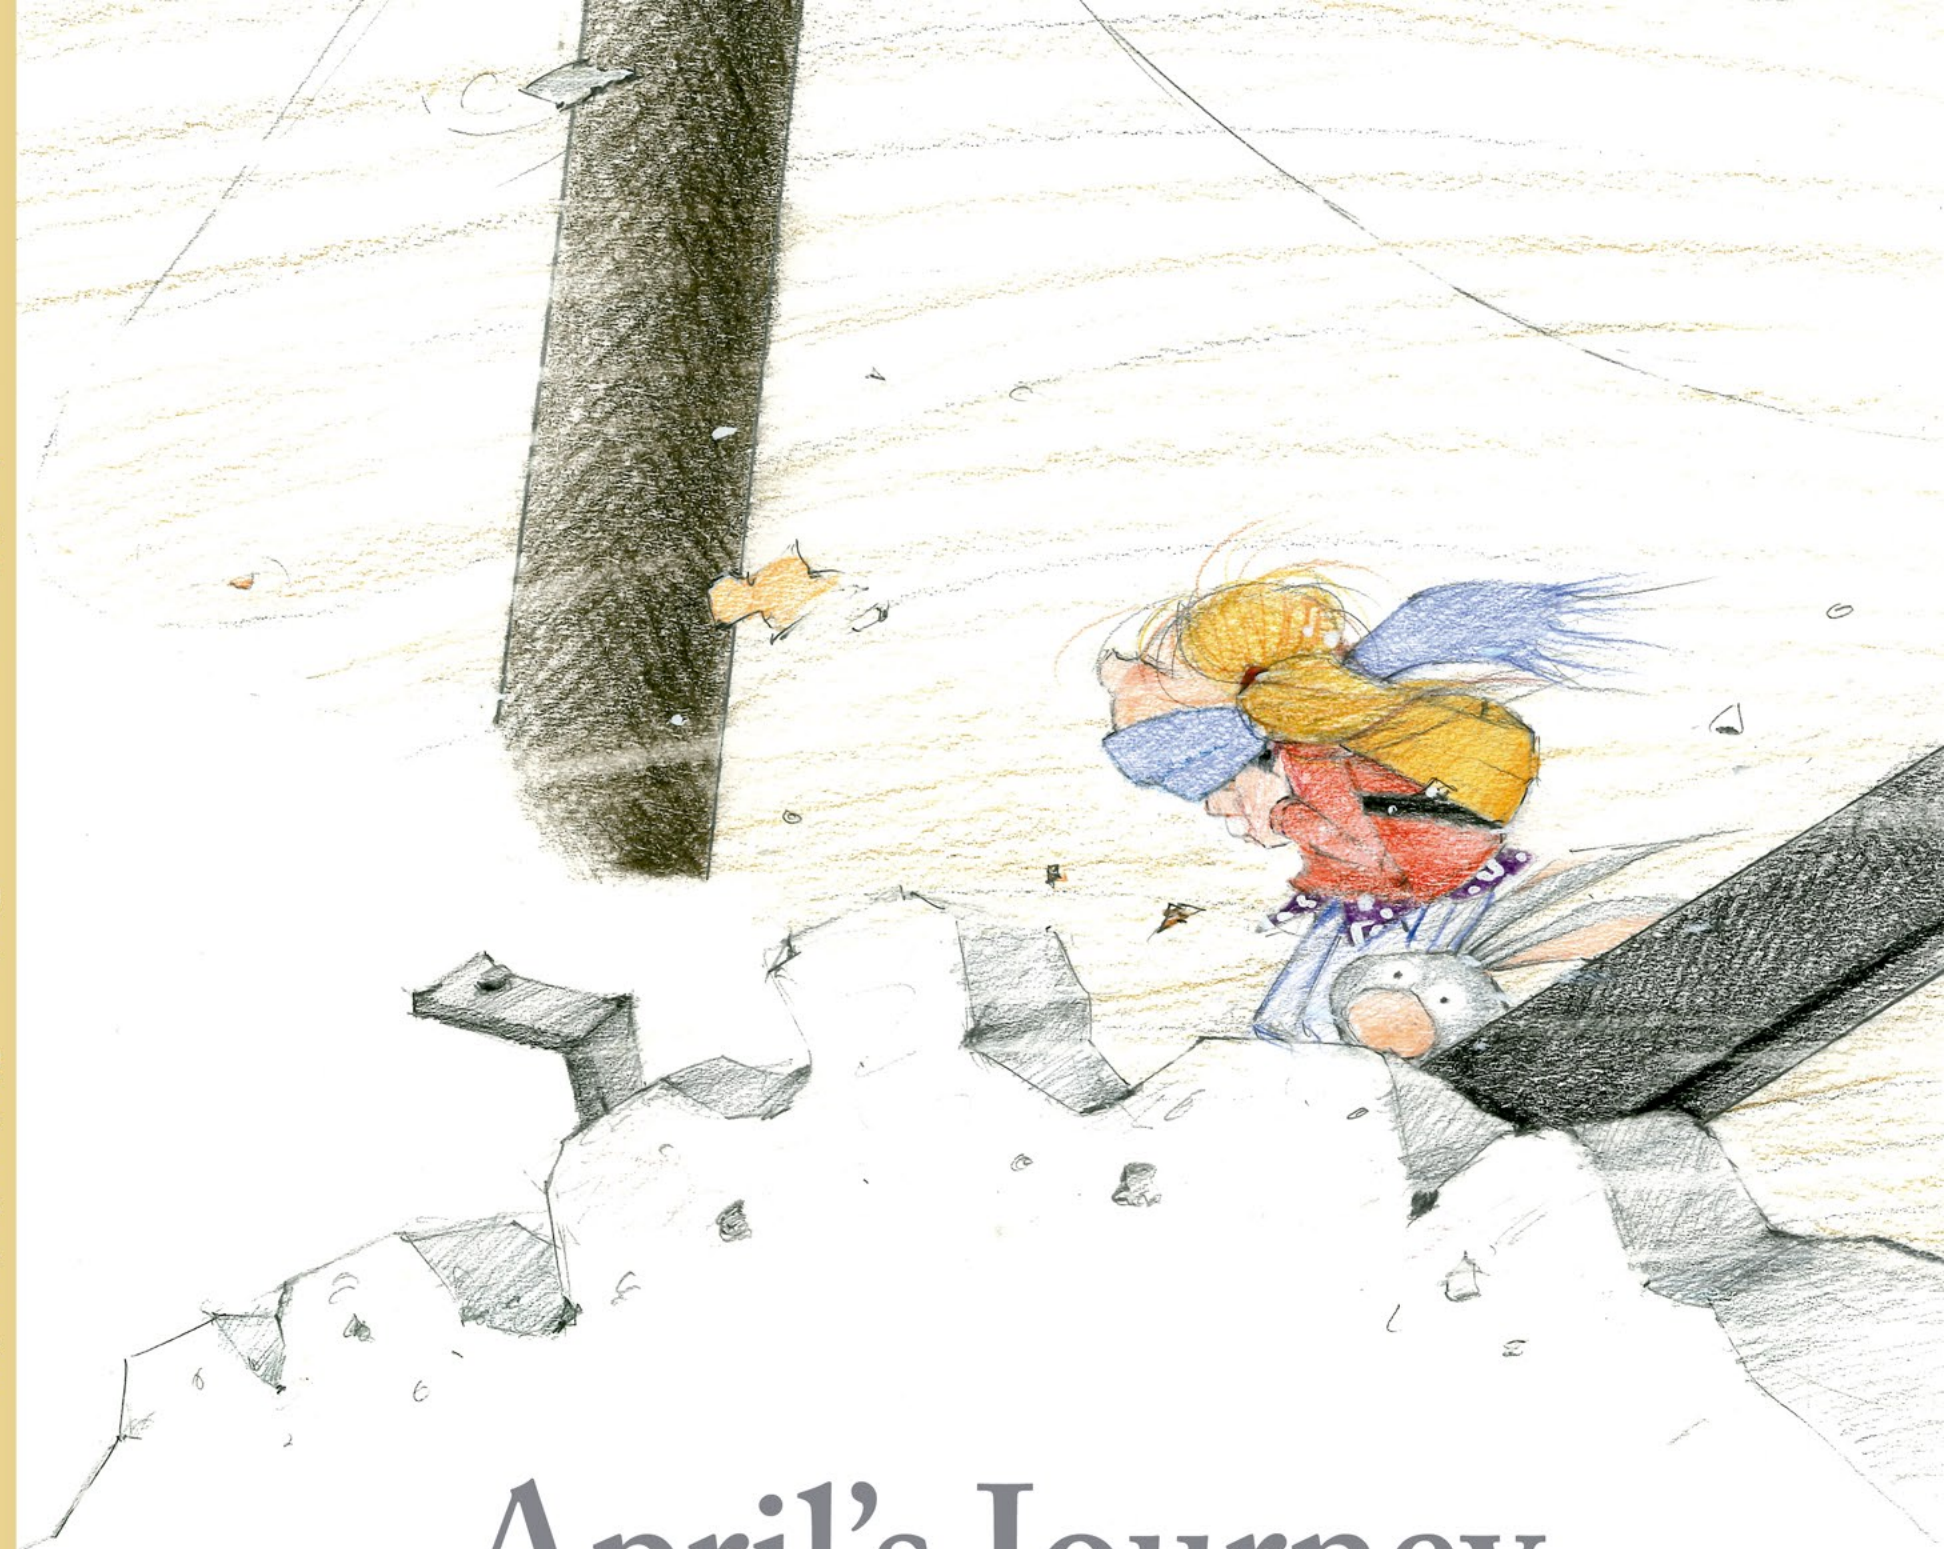

Little April is alone—until Julio appears.
Together, they set off on a journey in search of a home,
accompanied by Coco and Nina, their stuffed animals,
and their backpacks full of memories.

April's Journey is the journey of many children.
A story to spark conversation about something that should never happen.

After the bombs, there was nothing.
There was no one.

Only April, with her backpack of memories.

And Coco, her stuffed rabbit.

April whispered to Coco,
“Maybe we can find a new home.”

And they walked through the rain.

They walked through the snow.

Out of the wind, Julio appeared.
He was alone, with his backpack of memories.
And Nina, his stuffed bear.
